

In predicting the likelihood of insurance coverage among women 55 to 64 years of age in 1992,

◆
◆
◆
◆ working .1995)
.1(Tj95)

Rather than raise the age of eligibility and increase the numbers of uninsured older women, policymakers need to consider ways to reduce this number. Health Affairs (Millwood) 2014;33(10):e1711-1716

* cited popular support for allowing uninsured